Tammany's Strong Bill Against All Kinds of Evil "Combines."

enator Canter Presented the Measure to the Upper House and Mr. McKenn Brought It to the Attention of the Assem blymen - Indications that It Will be Rushed Along as Speedily as Possible-What the Bill Would Accomplish.

ISPECIAL TO THE WORLD.] ALBANY, Feb. 2 .- THE EVENING WORLD'S rusade against combinations which gamble in life's necessities has aroused the Legislature to such a degree that a dozen or more are drawing bills to stamp out these gross outrages. In addition to the strong measures already presented in the upper House by Senator Langbein and in thel Assembly by Mr. Finn, Senator Cantor in the Senate to-day introduced a bill which is more sweeping than the others in its provisions.

It was drawn by Gen. Roger A. Pryor. President George H. Forster, of the Board of Aldermen ; R. E. Deyo, T. C. Crane and W. W. Cook, the committee appointed by Tammany Hall to draft as stringent a measure as

The bill is entitled, "An act to suppress trusts, monopoles, and promote free competition in trade." It prohibits in every possible form the creation or maintenance of any trust or combination by which prices for commodities entering into consumption shall be fixed, regulated or controlled. It prohibits also any agreement as to the price to be charged for any commodity, or any agree ment not to sell below a certain standard of value. The penalties provided for violation of the act are very severe. The bill provides

Any contract or agreement in violation of any provision of the preceding sections of this act shall be absolutely veid, and not enforceable either in law or equity.

Any purchaser of any article or commodity from any individual, company or corporation transacting business contrary to any provision of the proceding sections of this act shall not be liable for the price or payment of such article or commedity, and may plead this act as a defense to any suit for such price or payment.

Any person or officer or agent of any sompany or cor-poration who shall violate any provision of the preceding sections of this act, or who shall directly or indirectly make or enter into or execute or carry out any of the cou tracts or agreements above mentioned, or shall be or be-come a party or privy thereto in any manner, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined in the sum of $3,000 or be imprisoned for a period not exceeding two years, or be both so fined and imprisoned in the discretion of the court.

Any corporation created or organized by or under the laws of this State which shall violate any provision of the preceding sections of this act shall thereby forfeit its corperate rights and franchises, and its corporate existance shall thereupon cases and determine; and it shall be the duty of the Attorney-General, of his own motion and without leave or order of any court or judge, to institute an action in behalf of the people for the forfeiture of such rights and franchises and the dissolution of such

It shall be unlawful for any corporation created o organized under or pursuant to the laws of any other State or country, which shall have violated any pro-vision of the preceding sections of this sot, to transact business or to prosecute or maintain suits in this State, and all the acts and contracts in this State of such corporation so offeeding shall be void and of no effect; and any officer or agent of such corporation having se violated any provision in the preceding sections of this act who, knowing of such violation, shall act or transact business in this State for or on behalf of such corporation shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon convic-tion thereof shall be fined in the sum of $5,000 or be im-prisoned for a period not exceeding two years, or be both so fined and imprisoned in the discretion of the ort.

Softhing herein contained shall prevent any aor associations of laboring men from passing and adopting such regulations as they may think proper in reference to wages and the compensation of labor; and such assemblies and associations shall retains and there is hereby recurred to them—all the rights and privilege to the centrary notwithstanding.

Mr. McKenna presented the same bill in the Assembly. Both will be progressed as speedily as possible.

Budson County Cattle Quarantined. Hudson County cattle have been placed under quarantine, by a resolution of the Board of Health edopted yesterday afternoon. Dr. Dimond, the Superintendent of the New Jersey branch of the United States Bureau of Animal Industry, and Dr. Hunt, Secretary of the State Boare of Health, declare that pleuro-pneumonia is more prevalent among the cattle of Hudson County than in any other part of the State. They believe a quarantine of six months to be the only remedy.

Leah Schmaskey's Naughty Son Let Boys Gamble in Her Rooms.

Leah Schmaskey, who is old and weighs about three hundred pounds, was tried to-day in the General Sessions Court on a charge of permitting gambling in her rooms at 59 Mott street. The complainant was Detective Crystal, of the Elizabeth street squad, who said that he headed a party of police who swooped down on the place on Sept. 14. He swooped down on the place on Sept. 14. He found twelve boys, nine of whom were less than fourteen years old, playing poker.

"I saw one of the lads go 15 cents better on three nines," said the detective.

"Did you call him?" asked Lawyer Price.

"We called them all down," replied the detective, "and took them to the lock.up."

"You gentlemen seem to be well acqainted with the ghme," said the Recorder, glancing first at the lawyer and then at the detective.

"I never saw the game myself."

Gerry, of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, thinks that the strain on the boy's mind is too great and wants the permit issued by the Mayor to give concerts

After the autopsy the body was delivered to the dead man's aunt, Mrs. Elizabeth Caldwell, of 726 Tenth avenue. The hospital authorities, recognizing that the death was due to carelessness on the part of one of their employees, sent word that they would bear all the expense of the funeral.

Undertaker Samuel J. Luckings, of Ninetyninth street and Tenth avenue, furnished a solid rosewood casket with silver handles, and three coaches to take the mourners to Evergreens Cemetery. The relatives present were Charles McLean, of West Sixty.first street, an engineer in the employ of the Dock Department; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dean, of 506 West Thirty-third street; Mr. and Mrs. Carlow, of Brooklyn, and Daniel Spence, of Providence.

The Rev. Thomas M. Peters, of St. Michael's Episcopal Church, conducted the services. There was a strong feeling of indignation among the relatives present at the method of the young man's death, and threats were made of a suit against the hospital authorities for damages.

Supt. James R. Lathrop was seen at the hospital this morning by an Evening World reporter. He seemed desirous to have the occurrence looked upon as an unfortunate accident, for which no one in particular was in his private office. F. B. Thurber was an interested spectator.

Mr. Gerry appeared on the scene armed with a big bundle of type-written copies of letters received by him concerning the lad's welfare, together with accounts of the lives of youthful predigies. Among the latter was a life of James Speaight, better known as "Young Americans," written by Thomas Bailey Aldrich.

He said that he was still convinced that an He said that he was still convinced that an elevator boy was not needed in the institution, and that no change would be made in that regard. He thought that some blame night perhaps attach to orderly Thomas Mills for giving the word "Ready" while the elevator was on the floor above, but Mills was a good officers, and he would be retained. Mr. Lathrop misisted that there was no wilful delay in notifying the authorities of the death. He wrote and mailed a letter to the Board of Coroners Tuesday night. The blame for the delay must rest, in his opinion, with the Post-Office people.

Herbert H. Bennet, the young orderly who had charge of the carriage containing Mc-Leau's unconscious form, and heedlessly pushed it into the empty elevator shaft, occupied a cell in the West Forty-seventh street station-house last night. He is a weak-looking man, twenty-four years of age. He wears spectacles for near-sightedness, He was much cast down by his misfortune, and could not eat, although Capt. Killilea had good meals brought in from a neighboring restaurant.

Young Americus charmed Boston audiences for three and a half years, but died a few hours after a matinée performance of the "Naiad Queen." in that city in 1877, from exhaustion. His last words were: "Gracious God, make room for another little child in Heaven!" and he was only six years old.
Mr. Gerry argued that the cases of Speaight and Hofmann were alike, requiring only a finding of the difference of proportion in age. Little Hofmann will be eleven on June 20 next. age. Little Hormann will be eleven on June 20 next.

Among the would be spectators were several fathers accompanied by their own prodicties; old and gray-haired men and sympathetic women. But all were disappointed in the hope of getting a glimpse of the boy, for he was smuggled into the private office before his presence was known in the building. The physicians consumed an hour and a quarter in a thorough physical examination of young Hofmann, and at the conclusion Manager Morton hustled the boy and his father out of the building and into a closed carriage, which took them to their hotel.

Little Hofmann pushed open the big spring restaurant.

In conversation with an Evening World reporter Bennet, said that he did not think himself at all to blame for McLean's death, "Mr. Mills called out to me that it was all right," he said, "and he ought to know better than I. He is the man who always sends patients up from the operating-room. The elevator shaft was quite dark so that I could not see even if my eyesight was good. "There ought to have been a man in charge of the elevator. I know other hospitals in the city have elevator boys. There are two in charge of the elevators at St. Luke's Hospital, where I was employed fourteen months, and they have them also at the New York and Bellevue Hospitals. If I go free of the charge, as I expect to, I shall go straight to my relatives in Yorkshire, England.

At noon Policeman Brunner took Bennet down to the Coroner's office to await Coroner Nugent's investigation.

When arraigned before Coroner Nugent, Bennett told his story of McLean's death, He said that he and Mills had wheeled the stretcher to within two feet of the elevator Little Hofmann pushed open the big spring door at the Broadway exit of the Stewart Building as easily as a man could do it, and the door swings heavily.

The doctors agreed that Josef was mentally and physically the finest and most remarkable boy they had ever seen.

At 1.20 Mayor Hewitt summoned the reporters to his presence. The Mayor said that little Hofmann had been examined by Dr. Bryant and Dr. Janeway in the presence of Dr. Hamilton and Dr. Sayre.

The doctors had agreed that the lad's physical functions were all in good order; that he was of a highly organized nervous temperament and should not be judged by the same rule as other children are judged; that there were no indications of any substantial serious injury thus far.

Mills opened the door and walked away without saying a word. Bennett, supposing from Mills's action that the elevator was there, pushed the stretcher into the doorway. The stretcher fell down the shaft in spite of his efforts to hold it. His attention was entirely occupied with the patient. As he had been in the hostital only four days he was not familiar with that there were no indications of any substantial serious injury thus far.

The Mayor then remarked that he had decided to allow the boy's performances to be limited to four, all told, during a week, and as far as possible to permit a day to intervene between each performance.

Mr. Hofmann and Mr. Abbey agreed to this arrangement. Mr. Gerry said he was satisfied. it. His attention was entirely occupied with the patient. As he had been in the hos-pital only four days he was not familiar with stiefied.

Another Outbreak at the Leake and Watte Orphan Home at 3 A. M .- Forty Little Girls Led by a Companion Through Smoke and Flames to Safety-Boys Distinguish Themselves as Volunteers-Loss of Life Prevented by a Teacher.

Firemen, policemen and the fire patrol had eft the Leake and Watts Orphan Home, One Hundred and Tenth street and Sixth avenue, after extinguishing the fire which broke out yesterday afternoon, and the 100 fittle orphans had been quieted down and tucked sway in their smoky-smelling dormitories, and were sleeping soundly in the belief that they were safe from fire alarms.

It was but a fancied security, not fully shared by Supt. R. M. Hayden. The latter had organized a patrol by the male employees about the building, and it was not ndulged in at all by one of the teachers, Miss Tompkins, whose room is on the second floor, directly opposite the closet where the fire of vesterday originated.

Miss Tompkins, scenting danger and unble to sleep, sat in her room and read.

At 3 o'clock this morning an unusual noise attracted her attention. It was like the snapping of dried twige, and accompanying it was a roaring sound.

Startled from her book and fearing the worst, Miss Tompkins ran to the door of her room, opened it and found the hall ablaze with light and filled with rolling volumes of smoke.

The fire was on the third floor, above the place where it broke out in the afternoon and near the dormitories in which were sleeping nearly every one of the forty little girls of the Home, they having been nearly all sent to the floor above because of the damage to the lower dormitory resulting from the afternoon's fire.

the lower dormitory resulting from the afternoon's fire.

The woman was transfixed with horror for a moment. The fire was directly in front of the door of the dormitory and encircled the stairs down which the little ones must escape. Escape bade fair to be cut off.

Recovering her power of locomotion, the teacher ran down the main hall to Supt, Hayden's apartments and aroused Mr. and Mrs. Hayden, who at once responded to her warning cry.

Mrs. Hayden rushed to the rescue of the warning cry.

Mr. Hayden rushed to the rescue of the children, mustering the boys in their playroom in the basement.

Mrs. Hayden wakened the female servants who slept on the floor where the fire was raging unconscious of their danger, and opened the doors to allow the escape of all.

Miss Tompkins had in the mean time hurried back to arouse the girls in the fire-encircled dormitory only to find that Fanny Molloy, a sixteen-year-old girl, had the beyy of frightened tots out of bed and was piloting them through the smoke and flame down the stairs to the main hall.

No time was lost in clothing the children, who rushed fearlessly through the fire, emboldened by the example and entreaties of Fanny.

Esterbrook, a lad of thirteen, volunteered to get it from the dormitory.

Supt. Hayden's amateur fire brigade, with recharged extinguishers, which had done such good work on the day previous, kept the fire down in the closet near the door.

The boys succeeded in getting all of the clothing, and the simple toilet of the children was made in the great hall, where they were as merry over it as if they had not just excaped a great dauger.

When the fire was discovered it had reached the roof and was raging in the garret over the main building, fifty feet away, while sparks were showering down through the hall.

Mr. Miller, a contractor, residing at One Hundred and Thirteeuth street and Tenth avenue, saw the blaze and hurried down to the asylum, where he rendered valuable assistance. Afterwards he took fifteen of the litsistance. Afterwards he took fitteen of the fit-tle girls to his home.

An alarm of fire had been sent out immo-diately after the discovery of the blaze by Miss Tompkins, and the department re-sponded rapidly, and succeeded in extin-guishing the flames after a goodly portion of the roof of the west wing had been de-

Supt. Hayden had arranged for a tour of inspection of the building once every hour during the night, and the last four was made by two employees named Buckstone and Herr at 2 a. m. It is not thought that it could have been very thorough, for an hour later the entire garret was enveloped in flame. Mrs. Hayden, who was seen by an Eventua airs. Hayden, who was seen by an Evening World reporter, miluly censured the Fire Department and the fire patrol for leaving the fire in the afternoon without having en-tirely extinguished it, as she believes the second conflagration was the result of some smouldering spark which had escaped the firemen. firemen.

She is modest in demeanor, and did not attempt to glorify herself. To the reporter who interviewed her, she said that she didn't stop to see how high the flames leaped or how thick the smoke was, but pushed the children right through both and followed herself as fast as her lameness would allow.

The origin of vesterday sire, which started in a closet adjoining the stairway on the second floor, has not yet been ascertained. There were kept in the closet the kerosene lamps used in the institution, but none of them was broken.

The daily drill of the children was found to be of invaluable assistance during the fire, and they obeyed orders without a murmur or a cry of fear.

a cry of fear.

The best of discipline prevailed, and it is probably owing to this fact, as well as to the timely alarm and heroic behavior of Fanny Molley, that this simple fire was not accom-panied by loss of life.

STRIKING CIGAR-MAKERS INDIGNANT.

They Charge Jacoby & Bookman With a Bit of False Pretense.

The striking eigar-makers are very indignant to-day over what they consider an attempt on the part of Messrs. Jacoby & Book-man to get back their 200 striking hands under false pretenses.

The Strike Committee of the International

The Strike Committee of the International Unions, reported that they had arranged with Jacoby & Bookman to take back their hands at the oid prices, and yesterday they went to the factory in East Thirty-eighth street, prepared to go work. But the firm wanted to place the eigar-makers in the rear shop, where the cheaper grade of cigars have been made at $3.25 per 1,000. The same hands formerly had been employed at $5.25 per 1,000.

The committee was notified of the action of the firm. All hands refused to resume work, and went away. A member of the committee said that a meeting of the Manufacturers' Association had been held lately, and that it was probable that Jacoby & Bookman had been induced to go back on the agreement made with the strike committee.

A meeting of the Joint Boards of the several International Unions will be held tonight at 101 Avenue A.

No time was lost in clothing the children, who rushed fearlessly through the fire, emboldened by the example and entreaties of Fanny.

In their night clothing they were all mustered in the lower main hall, and not one was missing or injured beyond a bruise or a slight burn.

The children must have clothing if they were to be forced out into the street, and several of the orphan boys, led by Eddie Esterbrook, a lad of thirteen, volunteered to get it from the dormitory.

hold him for extradition papers, the Sheriff gave him two guards and allowed him to remain in his own private roons guarded by them. One remained in the room all night, He claims and says it is a great mystery how Carpenter disappeared.

The Sheriff is making efforts now to capture him, but the escape shows Carpenter to be too shrewd to be cornered again.

George Heywood Carpenter was the President and Treasurer of the Brookside Knit-ting Company. His office was at 149 Church street, in this city, and the mills of the com-ting Company. His office was at 149 Church street, in this city, and the mills of the company in Troy.

The crime for which he was arrested by Detective Sergt. Sheldon, of Inspector Byrnes's staff, on Jan. 27, was the forgery of receipts of invoices of goods alleged to have been consigned to his New York agent, the Foster Black Company, of 205 Church street. On the forged receipts alleged to have been made by receiving clerks of the Foster Black Company, Carpenter received payment.

On the same day that Mr. Black notified Inspector Byrnes, Nov. 5, 1887, Carpenter left the city. Afterwards it was ascertained that Carpenter had swindled his business associates out of about $60,000.

Inspector Byrnes said to an Evento World reporter this afternoon that he had learned that Carpenter was free, and was of the opinion that he had been let out by the jall authorities.

It will be remembered that when the Inspector telegraphed the Florida authorities to arrest the man they refused to do so without a reward being paid. This Inspector Byrnes refused to do and sent Detective Sergt. Sheldon down to apprehend the fugitive.

Sheldon is still in Jacksonville, and the Inspector expects further particulars of the escape from him.
